

Richard Weiss

Senior Vice President
Senior Portfolio Manager
Chief Investment Officer, Multi-Asset Strategies

Richard Weiss is a Senior Vice President, Senior Portfolio Manager and Chief Investment Officer (CIO), Multi-Asset Strategies for American Century Investments, a premier investment manager headquartered in Kansas City, Missouri. He is based in the company's Los Angeles, California office.

As CIO, Rich is responsible for the team that manages the firm's multi-asset strategies, including One Choice Portfolios® (Target Risk and Target Date), and Strategic Allocation, as well as custom solutions created for clients. He also is a member of the firm's Asset Allocation Committee, which is responsible for establishing investment policy and reviewing investment decisions for all the firm's multi-asset products, and the firm's Investment Oversight Committee.

Prior to joining the firm in 2010, Rich was Executive Vice President and Chief Investment Officer of City National Bank, where he was responsible for the bank's investment management group and directed investment policy and strategy. Previously, he was Executive Vice President and Chief Investment Officer at Sanwa Bank California, where he managed all aspects of their investment department. Earlier in his career, Rich held senior investment positions at Vantage Global Advisors, TSA Capital Management, PaineWebber and Mellon Bank. He has worked in the investment industry since 1984.

Rich holds a bachelor's degree in Finance from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and a master's degree in Business Administration from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business. He has authored several academic papers and is well known for his advanced work in the field of global investing. Rich is also a frequent guest on CNBC, Bloomberg Television, Fox Business and Bloomberg Radio.

